After speaking of the millions of white fish, trout, pike perch and other fish hatched at the station during the past season, the article says:

Mr. Wires talked with such ease and positiveness of the number of fry of each class hatched and distributed that the Herald man's curiosity, as to how he arrived at the figures, was aroused to the highest pitch. "No, we don't count them," laughed the superin-tendent, "although we can tell the exact number by measurement with surprising accuracy. After the eggs are cleaned up we meas-ure them. White fish for instance run 86,000 to a quart. Trout eggs have to be hand picked and are hatched on wire trays. They run sixteen to the square inch on the tray, or about 5,500 to the quart. We know just about how many fry are in a trough so we can easily get a required number when we begin to distribute. In shipping we put only 5,000 lake trout in a can which would take 25,000 or 80,000 white fish or nearly 100,000

Mr. Wires, the new superintendadent, is a thorough and practical fish culturist of unusual experience. He says we does not know anything but fish, and yet he is happy. In the fall of 1880 Mr. Wires began his work in the United States commission by gathering eggs for the Northville station. In a short time he went to the Alpena station, where he was the practical head for over eleven years. For a few months he was on the Delawase.

The power of man's mind is wonderfully illustrated in the conceiving and construction of our modern floating palaces. Surely the M. P. Our own City of Alpena is not a whit behind the Manitou—in point of excellence, orig-inality and speed being about equal.
